

ADVENTURE CARD: BABIES

THIS MONTH'S BIG IDEA:

God's faithfulness doesn't show up in one dramatic moment (Acts 20:35). It's found in the everyday, consistent hard work of giving, over and over again. That's what faithfulness looks like. The same is true in your home: every response to a cry, every feeding, every bedtime is a small act of faithfulness that builds trust, a living picture of how God is faithful to you every single day.

Every time you give your child your attention, your time, and your "yes," you are showing them, before they have words for it, what it looks like to live open-handed. It's no coincidence that this is exactly the work already happening in this age range: your baby is forming attachment, learning that they can count on you to show up for them again and again. That same secure bond is what teaches them to trust, and trust is where open-handed living starts. You can teach your baby how to live with openness to what God has for them through the ordinary rhythms of your day.

INCORPORATE INTO YOUR DAILY RHYTHM:

Week 1

Pick one everyday routine (a feeding, a diaper change, bedtime) and be fully present in it every time this week.

Say this: "God is faithful, and so am I."

Week 2

When your baby reaches for you or cries out this week, respond the same steady way every time.

Say this: "I'm here. I'm with you."

Week 3

Faithfulness shows up most in the hard moments, not just the easy ones. This week, notice when it's hardest to respond well, and respond anyway.

Say this: "I'm still here. God is still faithful."

Week 4

Repeat one routine the exact same way, start to finish, all week. Watch for the moment your baby starts to recognize what's coming next.

Say this: "You can count on me."

Week 5

Keep your routine and words going as the month closes. Faithfulness is staying committed to the small things, again and again.

Say this: "God is faithful to us every single day."
